Water art coming to city

JAN ENGOREN JENGOREN@TRIBUNE.COM

As a complement to a $30 million upgrade to the city's East Plant Ion Exchange water treatment facility is the installation of a public art project, "Water, You and I," through the city's Art in Public Places program.

The winning concept submitted by the Iowa team of David Dahlquist and Matt Niebuhr was selected by an independent panel and approved by the Boynton Beach Arts Commission.

"The 'Water, You and I' project will be a welcome addition to the public art program," said Debby Coles-Dobay, the city's public arts manager. "The project's sculptural elements will be fun, educational and interactive, engaging the community to learn about the value of their drinking water."

In addition to the sculpture, upgrades to the facility include a state-of-the-art MIEX pretreatment system for odor removal, reductions in chemical costs and the ability to process 24 million gallons per day.

The sculpture, which will be installed in Harmening Park, on the corner of Seacrest Boulevard and Woolbright Road, allows visitors to experience the drawing of water from the well, and make a visual connection to the Florida Aquifer — the source of water in Boynton Beach.

Two major elements will communicate the relationship of how water is delivered to our taps.

One element will consist of a glass tile wall representing the sky, landscape, aquifer and water.

The second element consists of a gathering place called the "Water Pavilion," in which a water haiku will be laser cut into an opening in the sculpture, allowing water and light to pass through.

According to Dahlquist, the two studied

Boynton Rotary Club celebrates 75 years

JAN ENGOREN JENGOREN@TRIBUNE.COM

The Boynton Beach/Lantana Rotary Club celebrates its 75th anniversary this year, having been part of the Rotary International Service Organization for the past quarter century.

Founded in 1905, the international service organization has boasted esteemed members such as James Cash Penney, founder of JC Penney Co.; astronaut Frank Borman; and current U.S. Sen. Dianne Feinstein.

"We want people to know we're here and what we're doing," said member Louise Nelson, a vice president of lending at Floridian Community Bank in Delray Beach. "Our philosophy is 'service before self.'"

"I researched a lot of organizations before I joined the Rotary Club, and saw that there were people here doing good in the community. If I invest my time, I want to see an impact and see results," she said. "We're looking for new members, especially women, and corporate sponsors to help us with our community service projects."

The club's first meeting on March 1, 1940 took place at the historic Woman's Club building with signature members Ed Cameron and Roland Owen, who owned the Lee Manor Inn at 11120 S. Federal Highway.

Other charter members include Oscar Winchester, who owned the Flatwoods Pineapple Plantation; Howard Hood; Gene Merkel; and M.A. Weaver, whose descendants still live in Boynton Beach.

Current members include Boynton Beach dentist Joe Condon; President

Steve Weissman, a manager in the Palm Beach County Property Appraiser's office; former Rolling Green Elementary School Principal Gay Voss; and area Governor Debbie Donnelly-McLay.

Some of their main initiatives include donating school supplies to the Milagro Center in Delray Beach; a school supply drive for The Women's Circle; delivering dictionaries to third-graders; raising money for the soup kitchen in Boynton Beach; teaching safe swimming and water safety with Blake Collingsworth's book "Josh the Otter"; and awarding seven high school students with $1,000 college scholarships.

Weissman, a member for three years, said,

City moves forward with building demolition

The decision to demolish a Boynton Beach landmark is moving along, despite one commissioner's concerns.

The city's redevelopment agency selected a demolition company to tear down the pastel green building from which the Sea Mist boat once launched at the Boynton Harbor Marina to make way for a boardwalk and open space.

BG Demolition of Boca Raton will complete the $30,000 demolition job.

The building will be razed in about three months, according to Mike Simon, assistant executive director for the city's redevelopment agency.

Still, Vice Mayor Joe Casello -- the lone commissioner who fought to keep the building standing -- says that the agency hasn't done enough to breathe life into the structure.

"The building could have been used," Casello said. "The [redevelopment agency] never explored the possibility of bringing businesses down to that spot in the marina."

Last year, Casello pushed an idea to bring a piano bar to the two-story building, but no developers came forward.

Vivian Brooks, executive director of the redevelopment agency, said that the agency did not entertain any requests to allow a business to use the building, but instead

"We're successful because everyone gives not only financially, but of their time."

"We have a lot of member participation," he said. "It's nicer than larger clubs where members may only give financially and not get personally involved."

In 2013, Donnelly-McLay, a pilot for FedEx, accompanied the club's first U.S. scholarship winner Destiny Andrews, a BASA Aviation Academy student at Boynton Beach Community High School, to the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences in Sweden for the Molecular Frontiers annual symposium.

A member of the strategic board of Molecular Frontiers, Donnelly-McLay went again in 2014 with scholarship recipient and South Tech nursing student Kellsie Kershaw.

One of the international club's main missions is the worldwide fight against polio, and Voss has traveled to India and West Africa working alongside the World Health Organization to immunize children against polio and to help build schools.

"I flew from Paris to Togo, West Africa, where I was met by local Rotarians from 15 African countries," she said. "It was an uplifting experience to help kids who were so appreciative of our efforts."

Voss goes to the gym each week to keep in shape for her international excursions. This May, she plans to go to the Ivory Coast with the Rotarians.

"What's most important is people doing for others," she said.

Police substation coming to MLK Boulevard

Boynton Beach city officials say that crime is a problem along the city's Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard, and now they have a plan to clean up the area.

"We need more of a police presence there," said Vivian Brooks, the executive director of Boynton Beach's Community Redevelopment Agency.

Recently, at a redevelopment agency meeting, the agency's board agreed to rent a 800-square-foot police substation at 404 E. Martin Luther King Blvd. to help deter crime. Police officers may be in the building as soon as next month.

"We hope to cut back on loitering," Brooks said. "We have 'No Trespassing' signs on our properties, but we are not an enforcement arm."

Blvd. is a street in the Heart of Boynton, a mostly African-American community in the city's downtown. The street is vital to the city's history and redevelopment, but criminal activity is stopping the area's progress, city officials say.

That's where the Boynton Beach Police Department comes in, Brooks said.

Jaclyn Smith, spokesperson for the police department, said the police chief hasn't worked out the specifics of the program, but the goal is to boost safety.

Brooks said the redevelopment agency and the police department will work closely to monitor the effectiveness of the community policing program.

In August, the redevelopment agency set aside

$200,000 to fund the program. Renting the building will cost the redevelopment agency $9,600 for a three-year lease, according to agency documents.

Board member David Merker said that he liked the plan.

"It's a wonderful idea," he said. "The people will realize that the city wants to take care of them when they see more police walking the streets."

Mack McCray, commissioner for the Heart of Boynton district and redevelopment agency board member, said a police substation in the Heart of Boynton won't deter crime unless the officers carry out patrols.

"Putting a substation on Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd is not going to do anything unless the police officers walk the beat," McCray said.

was following a board-approved master plan for the marina.

According to redevelopment agency documents, the building is "dated and unattractive" with multiple code violations and is "ineffective to renovate."

That's why the redevelopment staff created a plan that eliminated the building and replaced it with a boardwalk, palm trees and benches overlooking the Intracoastal Waterway.

The building was built in 1971, according to the Palm Beach County Appraiser's office, making it 44 years old -- six years shy of being able to be designated as historic, city officials say.

In the 1980s, the building was the booking area for the Sea Mist drift-fishing boat and a private residence for Janet and Wendall Hall, the couple who ran the operation.

And although the building may hold a special place in some residents' hearts, Warren Adams, the city's historic preservation planner, said the building does not have a significant historical background to save it from destruction.

The building has been on the chopping block since 2011, but resident protests have delayed the demolition.

Other commissioners and board members say that it's time for the building to go.

Mayor Jerry Taylor told Casello, "I've lost votes too, but as a board we agreed to tear down the building. So let's move forward."

Community service begins at home

You kids these days have it too easy!" As a child, we recall our parents reminding us that others don't have it as good as we do.

As adults, those words have a much deeper meaning. It's a call to action that we should instill in our own children.

Recently, two sisters who reside in Miami had the opportunity to give back to seniors who had their childhoods and their families taken from them. Holocaust survivors, both centenarians, were the recipients of smiles and goodies just prior to the Jewish New Year from these young women, who received in return a valuable lesson in reality.

One sister commented, "I was really happy to be able to give them that happiness for the day."

These siblings are learning that it is better to give than to receive. Those are core values that lead to a lifelong commitment to community service.

Serving the community teaches responsibility for others. With so many in the public eye being deceitful these days, now is the time for parents to step up and show their children that their actions can affect the world in a positive way.

To make it happen, it takes more than words. Parents need to provide the experience of volunteering. Pick a day and dedicate it as the date you and your family will engage in a charitable project together. From there, youngsters can take this experience and grow it into volunteerism of their own.

Contact area organizations and inquire if children are allowed to participate in service opportunities. Also, make sure the activity is age-appropriate and involves a little fun. That could include walking dogs at an animal shelter, or creating gift packages to be delivered to families in need or homeless soldiers stationed overseas.

Churches and synagogues often plan charitable activities that involve people of all ages, including toy, food and clothing drives. Some houses of worship even work together on such projects.

For more than 30 years, Congregation B'nai Israel and Ebenezer Missionary Baptist Church, both in Boca Raton, have united to serve Thanksgiving dinner to 5,000 hungry people.

Projects such as these give children hands-on experiences that what we often take for granted and mean so much more to someone in need.

The satisfaction and pride that come from performing good deeds early on can last a lifetime.

What do you think about Vishan's art?

PHURTURA BRAZIER
FRIEND

Vishan has a unique approach to the visual arts. It's refreshing that he sticks to telling his story through the Indian art disciplines. His political work is one of my favorite series. It was drawn in a way that any race or gender can relate to and I feel that it can be anyone's story.

Vishan approaches his work with the greatest detail. He sits for hours meticulously executing every line and even crafts his own brushes from fine feathers or hair. He brings a unique perspective to traditional Indian paintings.

ON THE SPOT

VISHAN SEENATH

NEW ARTIST AT THE BOYNTON BEACH ARTS DISTRICT

How did you come to the Boynton Beach Arts District?

I had been to events at BBAD and got to know Rolando Chang Barrero, the founder of the Arts District. I was teaching art in a middle school and when my contract was up, I decided to use the time to create and work on my art.

What is your style?

It's a mixture of everything I've learned, incorporating Western-style art and incorporating Asian-influenced aesthetics, including cultural influences from Indian, Thai and Buddhist artwork. I also work in pen and ink and prefer to paint with acrylics.

Where do you get your inspiration?

I study Indian art from the past and incorporate its influences into my work, focusing on issues such as racism and colonialism that affect me and other minorities. Much of my work is political in nature, dealing with social issues, factory and migrant workers, social consciousness and my experiences in cross-cultural dating.

What do you want to achieve with your art?

I want to show people a different perspective, to see something from another's perspective. If you can do this through art, that's what makes it great. Open a window into another's reality.

Are you disciplined in your art practice?

No. Distractions take over. It goes in cycles. I can paint and draw frenetically, then nothing, while I wait for inspiration to hit.

What is your creative process like?

I spend time looking back at my old work and sketchbooks to give me new ideas. I'm reimagining old work in new contexts, and spending time in self-reflection. I use a computer to do preliminary drawings. Then I print them and use carbon paper to trace the images onto the canvas. It's exacting work.

What accomplishment are you most proud of?

Getting through graduate school. It's one of the toughest things I've ever done. It's changed my outlook. I don't have the same inhibitions I had before. I channel my strongest ideas into my work and see what happens. I've created some controversy with my work and have gotten a strong response from the public. I challenged people's ideas and preconceived notions and, in the process, have grown both personally and artistically.

What did you want to be growing up?

A geneticist or biomedical engineer. I started those studies at FSU before I switched to art.

Whose work do you admire?

I love the work of Pakistani artist Shahzia Sikander, an expert in Indo-Persian miniature painting. I met her at the Norton Museum of Art last year and she is one of the first South Asian artists to contemporize Indian art, combining Muslim imagery and Indian themes.

What quality do you value most in yourself?

I'm curious about everything. I go beyond the superficial and try to learn as much as possible. I'm curious about the science and physics of everything.

The fist bump revolution

While we adults are busy teaching our children all we know about survival and finding success in a complicated world, our kids have plenty to teach us, as well. You probably know this is true if you've ever consulted a youngster for help with your new computer, cell phone, tablet, or even that new appliance, with pages of intimidatingly incomprehensible set-up directions. An effortless understanding of today's technology seems to be in the DNA of the young ... while those of us who are no longer young fight off the urge to take a baseball bat to mean-spirited computers and other alleged technological advances. So, it's in this spirit of being open to that which comes from the realm of the young that I am here to advocate for the end of the handshake and the introduction of the fist bump.

Let's face it: the world is one very unhealthy place. Germs. We can't see them, but they're there. Just ask those Native Americans who were given small pox infected blankets by those friendly colonists.

Researchers, it seems, have been hard at work measuring the amount of germs we pass on to each other when we high-five, shake hands and fist bump. The fist bump, immortalized by Michelle and President Obama after his first inauguration speech, turns out to be the safest way to make contact. Is that why our kids have been doing it? No matter. Scientists have run experiments covering their gloved hands with E. coli virus, and then executing the various methods of greeting. Their findings: high doses of bugs were passed during a handshake, but that amount was reduced by more than half when a high-five was employed instead. Then, even more hygienic was the fist bump, which further reduced the amount of germs being passed on.

Of course, none of this was news to the World Health Organization, which has advocated the use of an "elbow bump" as a germ-free greeting since 2006. Then, some academics must have been watching their kids, when the fist bump was suggested as an antidote to the H1N1 "swine flu" epidemic in 2009. Since then, researchers from Aberystwyth University have confirmed that a fist bump greeting reduces the spread of germs by a whopping 90 percent, making it the cleanest greeting yet. (Right now, in Africa, the "Ebola elbow" greeting has been proposed - which may seem odd when considering that the World Health Organization has been advocating coughing into those elbows for the last five years. (Perhaps, we're to cough into the left elbow while "greeting" with the right?)

I wonder how the good folks at FOX News are taking this. Remember how they relentlessly railed against the Obamas for their "terrorist fist bump"? If we assume that they read and are aware of events in the news, then can we expect a retraction of their attack on the Obamas? Will they run a story about how this gesture, adopted from the young, can lead to a healthier society, one where germs are not spread as freely as before? Will the threat of renewed Ebola in our midst have the FOX News crowd actually thanking the Obamas for modeling such comparatively risk-free contact? Don't hold your breath.

If we could get into our time machines and travel back hundreds of years, we might see people greeting each other by bowing, making no physical contact whatsoever. I don't think we're ready to re-adopt that custom. Do you? Now, the question is this: Will we see the day when a relatively hygienic fist bump greeting is the norm, exchanged between business executives, heads of state and wedding guests? Can you imagine Pope Francis fist bumping his way through Vatican Square? And if this happens, we can thank our teenagers for turning us all on to a new, accepted and healthier norm in society.

We've moved to a NEW LOCATION, to serve our patients better!

Water is being filtered as one stands inside the sculpture.

"The haiku is a distillation of an idea," he said. "We are made up of 50 percent water, although we are disconnected from nature. Does the public think about where clean drinking water comes from?"

"We hope the art makes them think about this in a visual way," Dahlquist said.

Civic Center to offer dog obedience classes

In addition to The Gold Coast Jazz Band, the Bob Roberts Society Orchestra, health fairs and rummage sales, the Boynton Beach Civic Center is offering classes for new dog owners.

Introduction to Dog Obedience and Bright Puppy Kindergarten classes (for ages 8 weeks to 5 months) will be taught by certified canine instructor Gari Weinraub.

New York-born Weinraub relocated to Boynton Beach after 25 years in Seattle, where she was a zookeeper at the Woodland Park Zoo, working with sloth bears and Asian sun bears.

"We think these classes will appeal to the public," said center supervisor Janice Phillips. "We're looking forward to having Gari here."

"It's something new for the Civic Center," she said. "People love their pets and want to make sure they do the right thing for them."

Weinraub will focus on teaching basic obedience, including walking on leash, focus and attention, house and crate training, impulse control and using positive reinforcement to obtain better behavior from your dog.

The puppy classes will focus on playing off leash and socialization.

"One of the difficulties in training is being consistent," said Weinraub, who has a degree in animal behavior from Western Washington University. "You must give clear cues to your dog."

"If you're consistent, most dogs will listen and understand," she said.

In the past, Weinraub has been the proud parent of Standard and Bouvier poodles, and said one of the smartest breeds she's trained is an English bulldog.

Surprisingly, she said her favorite breed is a pit bull.

"They're remarkable dogs," she said. "I love their personality, their devotion, loyalty, sweetness and tenderness."

"It's a myth that they are so dangerous," Weinraub said.

Nicole Pasqual and Louis Shore, a retired entertainment industry executive from California, and the proud owner of a 9-month-old Doberman Pinscher named Scarlett, have both taken private obedience classes with Weinraub.

"She's great," Shore said. "Not only does Gari teach the dog, but she works with the owner very carefully. Gari is dedicated to her craft and follows up with you with additional information, videos and a summary of what you've learned in class."

"Scarlett is a work in progress," he said, "but I can attest to Gari's skills and commitment."

Pasqual introduced a 4-month-old French bulldog, Max, to her older dog, Augustus, an 8-year old English bulldog.

"Augustus was aggressive and scared around Max, and had impulse control issues," she said. "Gari came within 24 hours and takes a holistic approach to training - including diet, exercise and behavior modification."

"She has a great attitude and trains both the dogs and the owner," she said. "She's truly a god-send."

Call the Civic Center at 561-742-6240. The Boynton Beach Civic Center is at 128 E. Ocean Ave. Cost is $100 for residents; $125 non-residents for six weeks of classes on Tuesday nights beginning

Take a free guided tour of Schoolhouse museum

JAN ENGOREN JENGOREN@TRIBUNE.COM

Boynton Beach historians Janet DeVries and Ginger Pedersen, in conjunction with The Boynton Beach Historical Society, are having a guided tour of the Schoolhouse Children's Museum & Learning Center on Saturday.

The masonry vernacular-style building, which is listed in the National Register of Historic Places, was built by architect William Maughlin in 1913.

"Participants who embark upon the history stroll will step back in time to the days when Boynton had less than 1,000 residents," DeVries said. "If you listen hard enough, you may hear the pitter patter of barefoot children of 100 years ago. When the school opened with 81 students, Boynton was a rural farming village and many of the youngsters came to school with no shoes."

"The guided tour will allow participants to see the lovely architecture including Dade County pine floors, bead board walls and belfry," she said.

Participants will meet

Hannibal Pierce, keeper of the Jupiter Lighthouse, learn about early transportation and mail delivery, local shipwrecks, Boynton's agricultural history and its namesake, Maj. Nathan Boynton.

Admission is free, but donations to the museum are encouraged. Advance registration is recommended.

Meet at 10 a.m. on the steps of the school at 129 E. Ocean Ave.

To register, visit eventbrite.com or call 561-327-4690.

Online tool for native gardening

Native landscaping can be as simple as planting a single shrub or as involved as recreating an indigenous habitat. Small or large scale, the benefits reach beyond a city yard.

Native landscaping strengthens the greater South Florida ecosystem by providing food and shelter for birds and butterflies. In the face of rising sea levels and climate change, natives boost migration outcomes for wildlife while reducing demands on natural resources.

"Native species are adapted to the precise climate, soils and other growing conditions unique to a given area," said George Gann, chief conservationist at the Institute for Regional Conservation.

Homeowners are among the biggest winners.

"The benefits to the homeowner include saving money by using fewer pesticides and fertilizers and conserving water. Native plants require less maintenance, increase wildlife viewing and are more resilient to hurricanes," Gann said.

Anyone can choose native plants for their yard with the information found in "Natives for Your Neighborhood." The institute's free online tool lists all types of greenery, organized by zip codes. Locating one plant to fill a gap or creating an authentic habitat is just a keystroke away.

"It's designed so a person with no background on native plants can find useful information and lead to further research," Gann said.

A search by zip code pulls up scores of possibilities. Many on the list have notations to distinguish plants that are readily available from hard-to-find choices. An advanced search option gives light preference, soil, form, drought tolerance, fruit, wildlife attractant and flowering choices.

Volunteer opportunities are available for ushers, tour guides, data entry, the gift shop, the education department and the administrative offices.

large-scale gardening. It's useful for ecological restoration projects.

For a regional website, "Natives for Your Neighborhood" is popular with 10,000 page views per week. But it's underutilized in Palm Beach County, since the institute moved to Delray Beach from Miami two years ago.

"We have four times as many users in Miami-Dade," Gann said. He's also working to bridge the gap between the consumer and supplier.

Jeff Nurge, owner of Native Choice Nursery in Boynton Beach, said he sees customers who have a desire to bring nature into their yard or be environmentally friendly.

"Nothing attracts butterflies better than native plants," said Nurge, also a guest columnist for Forum Publishing Group.

At his nursery, he'll advise novices on the right species for their space. He also takes requests for lesser-known plants and often makes a match when a wholesaler has a rare find.

Gann invites nurseries and landscapers to can join the site's "Find Native Plants" listing.

"I hope to expand the list so no matter where you are in South Florida, you can go to the website and find native plants in your area and vendors that have the plants for sale," Gann said.

Boynton senior swings for the fences in softball league

When Bill Woodford retired as a New York bus driver and moved to South Florida this summer, he was looking to get back into sports.

The 62-year-old from Pembroke Pines saw an announcement in the Sun Sentinel about the Pompano Senior Softball League and decided to check it out. He has since become a regular at Pompano Community Park, where games take place every Tuesday and Thursday morning. Players are in warm-up mode at 8:45 a.m. in preparation for the 9:30 a.m. action.

"I played a little bit in Fort Lauderdale at Mills Pond Park, and John Ritacco asked if I wanted to play with the team he runs [in Pompano]," said Woodford, who has played softball since his 20s. "I used to be very active, and now that I am retired, I have a lot more time. It's a lot of fun."

Woodford said the league can be very competitive, but there is also plenty of camaraderie and friendship.

"There are some players who are better than others," Woodford said. "You need players to be competitive, and regular guys get a shot to play, too. The main thing is that it's good exercise and it keeps you going. It keeps you alive."

Paul Segal, 64, who recently moved to Boynton Beach from Coconut Creek, said the league is lots of fun.

"When things aren't going so good [out on the field], I am not as happy," Segal said with a laugh. "I am just here to have some fun and get some exercise. We are all young at heart."

Segal has been playing organized ball since age 7.

"I have always liked to play ball," Segal said. "It relieves my stress. But I am also a competitive person and I like to win. When I don't win, I take it in stride. It's just a game."

Ernie D'Angelo, 70, also serves as a manager in the five-team circuit. He has been involved in the sport for 15 years and with the league for about the past 10.

"There are some guys out here who are competitive and others who aren't," said D'Angelo, who is also on a tournament team that travels around Florida once a month. "That's a lot of fun because you get to go to other cities and it is fabulous."

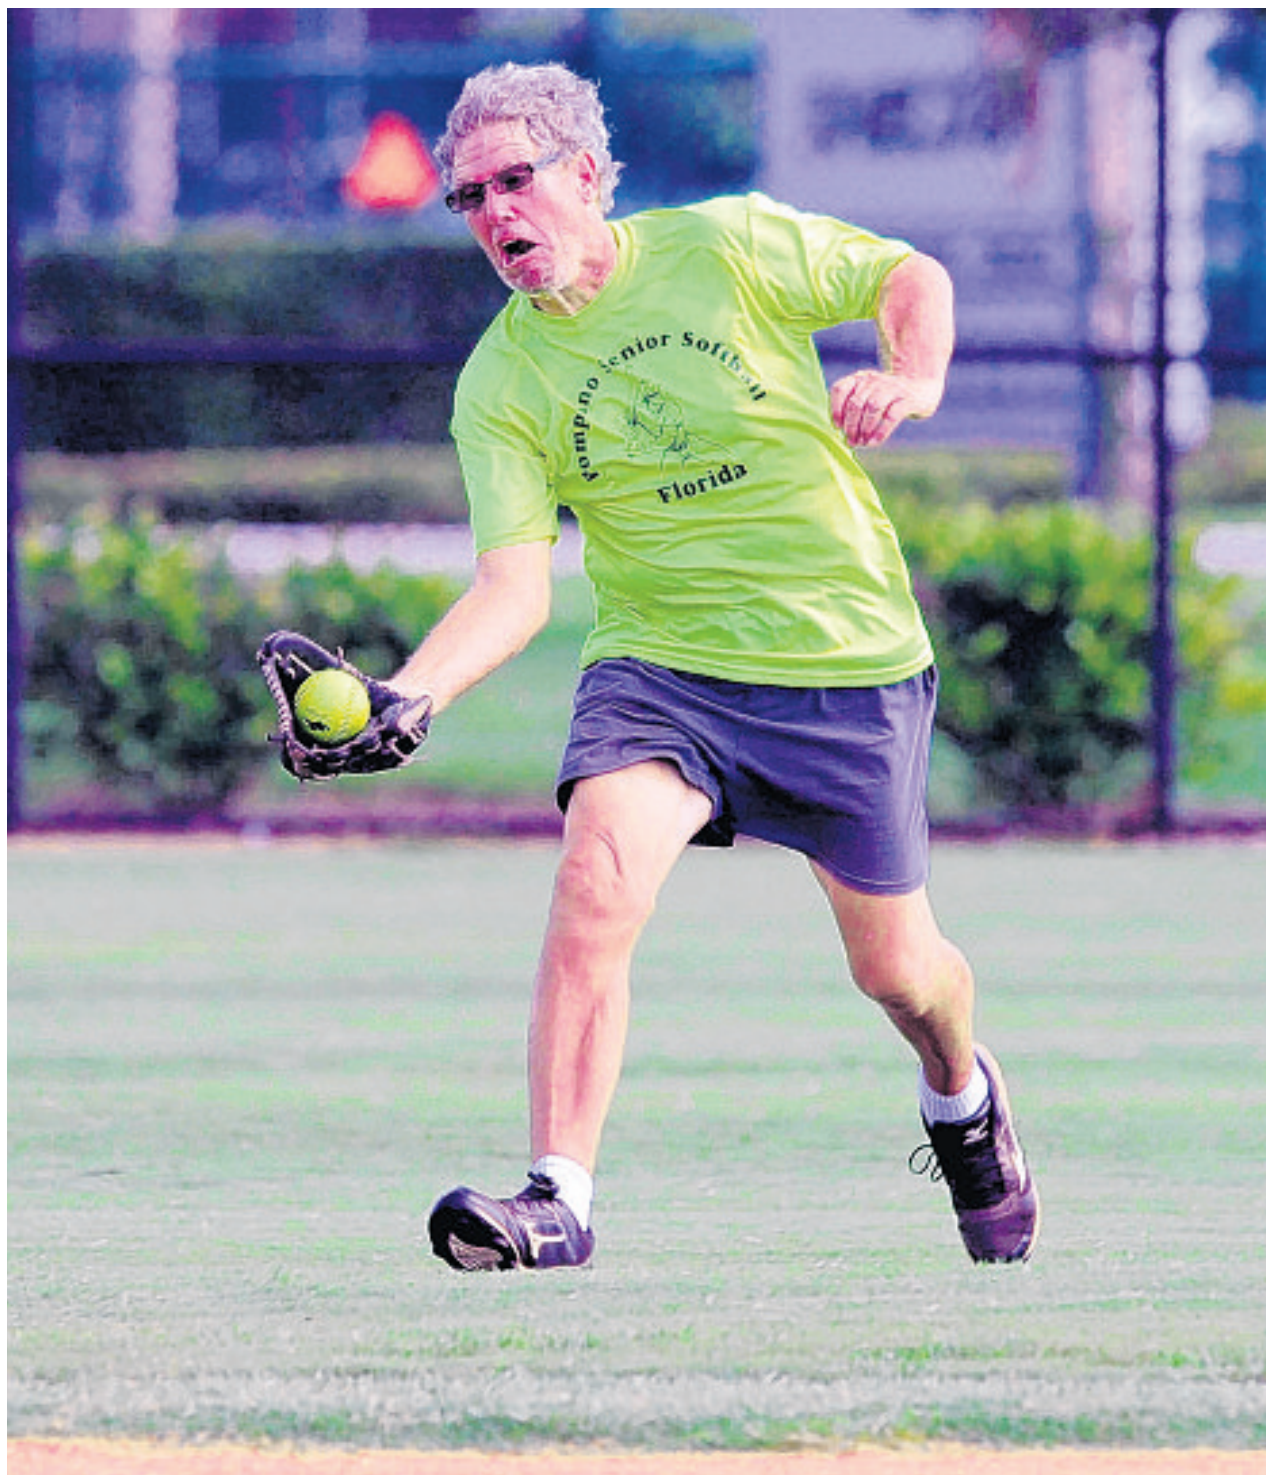

Ron Losey, 69, is one of nine board members for the league.

"You get guys out here in their 50s, 60s, 70s and some in their 80s, and they all get to play," Losey said. "They get some fresh air and some camaraderie. Everybody knows each other, and we have some new guys this season, and they all fit right in."

Since the league's fall season lasts only five weeks, a committee picks the teams based on ability. During the winter/spring season, when the snowbirds are back in town, there are usually eight teams with rosters selected through a draft by the managers.

"They come out here and we see how they perform and then we select them," Losey said of the draft process.

The league will also host in-house tournaments, typically on Saturdays, during the main season. The captains pick the players who play, plus bring in teams from other parks. One of the biggest draws takes place over the Christmas holiday when the league hosts its Snowflake Tournament.

"It is fun to play against other cities," Losey said. "People travel from as far south as Miami to as far north as Boynton Beach."

Players are asked to bring their own bats and gloves. Those interested in joining may call 954-603-6313.

Ghost tours dig up haunted past in Yesteryear Village

As the cooler months roll in, Ghost Tours at Yesteryear Village at the South Florida Fairgrounds begin again, with the first one set for Oct. 2.

"We have people who come and really feel like they experience things," Paige Poole, Yesteryear Village manager, said. "They have objects that appear in their camera and film. Floating orbs."

"They say the veil is thinnest around Halloween," Janice Nalis, one of the volunteer tour guides, said. "That we can communicate with the spirits easily."

Back in 2008, the cast and crew of Travel Channel's "Ghost Adventures" did a segment inside the Riddle House, one of four houses visited on the Ghost Tours.

"The 'Ghost Adventures' came here, did a big thing, then after that we started doing tours the first Friday of most months," Poole said. "It's been well received, and people are constantly asking to spend the night in the Riddle House, but we can't because of liability reasons."

At the Riddle House, it's said that Mr. Riddle, feeling wronged in death, has not moved on. Other buildings visited on the tour are the Corbett Shack, with multiple bodies rumored to have been found there; the Pineapple Processing Plant; and sometimes the Bait and Tackle Exhibit. Each place has its spooky story or spirits that visitors have experienced.

"I've had people run out of a building they're so scared," Nalis said. "I've seen them leave early while others seem to enjoy themselves."

Last May, "Ghost Adventures" returned to Yesteryear Village to do a follow up at the Riddle House for their "Aftershocks" special.

"They returned, and that's all we can say," Connie Christman, program coordinator, said. "It was really cool. It was a totally different story but they did touch base in the Riddle House and have Mr. Riddle come back out."

Though details on the follow-up show have yet to be released, Christman said people come by Yesteryear having seen the repeat episode of the Riddle House from years ago and are curious to see it.

"You're teaching them about the history," Nalis said. "Even though it's a ghost tour, it's history."

In addition to Oct. 2, tours are set for Nov. 6 and Dec. 4, before the South Florida Fair comes back to town. For the younger crowd, Yesteryear Village's Spookyville returns Oct. 16.

Admission is $18 per person. Reservations are required. The deadline to purchase tickets is noon the day before the tour. Yesteryear Village is at 9067 Southern Blvd. Call 561-790-5232.

Pharmacy Facts

Mike Corbin, R.Ph.

ALLERGIC TO PENICILLIN?

When asked if they are allergic to any medications, patients' memories and perceptions may not always prove to be correct. For instance, in one study, nearly 400 people who believe they were allergic to penicillin were administered an allergy test. As it turned out 94 percent tested negative for penicillin allergy. In another study, nearly 40 people believed to be allergic to penicillin were given penicillin skin testing, and all tested negative to the allergy. These findings come amidst warnings by the World Health Organization and other health experts that the world is facing a crisis in antibiotic resistance. Any perceived allergy to penicillin forces prescription limitations on doctors and unnecessarily makes patients pay for more expensive drugs.

We pride ourselves on the many services we offer to make your life a little easier. Whether it's for you or a loved one, our friendly and knowledgeable staff can answer questions ranging from prescription management to medication reviews or discuss ways to manage your health well-being. For more information, please give us a call. With our Multi-Month Generic Drug Program, you can get a 6 month or 12 month supply at enormous discounts. The more you buy, the more you save. We can even ship it to your door!

Think like an orchid

We all admire and care for our orchids outdoors on our screened-in patios, under our lanais and hanging on our trees. However, if grown indoors you have to think like an orchid. Just what does an orchid think about? For instance, the indoor grown orchid thinks for success. It must duplicate its natural growing conditions as much as possible. Since being an epiphyte (growing media is soilless) it prefers to attach its roots to rough bark or even stone.

So let's explore what growing an indoor orchid thinks about. It desires strong light, but not direct light late in the afternoon sun. It wants high humidity. Its roots require good aeration. The potting media should have periods of drying out, with periodic watering and misting of the foliage. The orchid can thrive in a temperature environment some where between 50 and 85 degrees. This temperature range can be controlled for indoor growing conditions. The closer one can control the temperature more success and better blooms will result.

Many store-bought orchids come in plastic pots or packaged with moistened root balls. The orchid thinks that this violates the golden rule of root aeration. The roots are not given a chance to dry out. The plant cannot breathe and the roots are subjected to root rot. However, the orchid roots can soak up the moisture quickly and start breathing without requiring a potting nutrient media.

The obvious step once a potted flowering orchid is brought home, many times as a gift plant, is to enjoy the beautiful blooms. However, do not repot a flowering orchid! The orchid is telling you that after I bloom cut off the dead stalk and start the repotting process.

The orchid prefers a home in a special pot and media mixture. A shallow terra cotta pot specifically designed for orchid growing features is recommended that has wide drainage holes allowing water to drain freely. The orchid likes to lie in a bed consisting of several chunks of bark, charcoal and Styrofoam.

Now, once the orchid is repotted it tells you I need long term insurance. Water me weekly and heavily. Allow the water to drench the roots. Feed me weekly with a balanced fertilizer at quarter strength. However, I like to dry out after a good watering. During colder months in South Florida keep me warm. Reduce the watering to once a month or so. Mist me so often to keep me hydrated.

It is known that the delicate beauty of an orchid hides a strength that is perfect for those whose hearts are green, but thumbs are brown. If you receive an orchid as a gift, the secret to success is location, location, location, proper watering and a bit of fertilizer. Remember that with proper care, the orchid is a thing of beauty, long lasting and “tough as nails.”

Warm up the sukkah with soup

Soukhot kicks off the soup season in our family. I love to start each evening Yom tov meal with a warm and soothing soup. For daytime meals when it's warm outside, I may make Chilled Mango Curry Soup or White Grape Gazpacho Soup.

CREAM OF WILD MUSHROOM SOUP

Serves 6

This soup is smooth, creamy and really decadent. You can make it either pareve or even better as a dairy soup. This one is adapted from an Ina Garten recipe.

5 oz. fresh shiitake mushrooms

5 oz. fresh portobello mushrooms

5 oz. fresh cremini (or porcini) mushrooms

1 tbsp. olive oil

1 stick plus 1 tbsp. unsalted margarine or butter, divided

1 c. chopped yellow onion

1 carrot, chopped

1 sprig fresh thyme plus 1 tsp. minced thyme leaves, divided

Kosher salt

Freshly ground black pepper

2 c. chopped leeks, white and light green parts (2 leeks)

1/4 c. all-purpose flour

1 c. dry white wine

1 c. vanilla soymilk or pareve milk or half-and-half

1 c. pareve whipping cream or heavy cream

1/2 c. minced fresh flat-leaf parsley parts, and coarsely chop the stems. Slice the mushroom caps 1/4-inch thick and, if there are big, cut them into bite-sized pieces. Set aside.

To make the stock, heat the olive oil and 1 tbsp. of the margarine/butter in a large pot. Add the chopped mushroom stems, the onion, carrot, the sprig of thyme, 1 tsp. salt, and 1/2 tsp. pepper and cook over medium-low heat for 10 to 15 minutes, until the vegetables are soft. Add 6 c. water, bring to a boil, reduce the heat, and simmer uncovered for 30 minutes. Strain, reserving the liquid. You should have about 4 1/2 c. of stock. If not, add some water.

Meanwhile, in another large pot, heat the remaining stick of margarine/butter and add the leeks. Cook over low heat for 15 to 20 minutes, until the leeks begin to brown. Add the sliced mushroom caps and cook for 10 minutes, or until they are browned and tender. Add the flour and cook for 1 minute. Add the white wine and stir for another minute, scraping the bottom of the pot. Add the mushroom stock, minced thyme leaves, 1 1/2 tsp. salt, and 1 tsp. pepper and bring to a boil. Reduce the heat and simmer for 15 minutes. Add the soymilk or half-and-half, pareve cream or cream, and parsley, season with salt and pepper, to taste, and heat through but do not boil. Serve hot.
